Poison. The ricin letter appears to come from the same person who wrote to the mayor.

A ricin-laced letter sent to President Barack Obama this week appears to be similar to letters sent to Mayor Michael Bloomberg, according to a source briefed on the matter.

The letter was intercepted before reaching the president, the Secret Service said in a statement to Politico.com.

According to NBC News, the text of the letter was identical to the letters sent to Bloomberg, including the line, "What's in this letter is nothing compared to what I've got planned for you."

Last week, letters were sent to Bloomberg and his gun control advocacy organization, Mayors Against Illegal Guns. Both letters referenced the "debate on gun laws."

On Wednesday, NYPD spokesman Paul Browne revealed that anonymous threats were received by the mayor and his advocacy group.

NYPD Emergency Service Unit police who came into contact with the letter are being examined for minor symptoms of ricin exposure that have since gone away, Browne said.

The FBI office in New York confirmed it was investigating the letter sent to Mayor Bloomberg.

New rules. Brooklyn DA to NYPD: No more condoms as evidence

In a letter to NYPD Commissioner Ray Kelly, Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes warned the NYPD that his office would no longer use possession of condoms as evidence of prostitution, the New York Times reported. NYPD spokesman Paul Browne reportedly agreed on that on behalf of the department but added, "We do not rule out their evidentiary value when going after pimps and sex traffickers. If there is a bowlful of condoms in a massage parlor, we want our officers to be able to seize them as evidence against the trafficker."

Authorities were trying to determine the cause of the fire.

Election 2013. Weiner avoids circumcision controversy question

Mayoral candidate Anthony Weiner was evasive at a Jewish Press mayoral forum Wednesday night when a question arose regarding a controversial circumcision method practiced by some in the Orthodox Jewish community, Politicker reported.

The method, called metzitzah b'peh, involves a mohel — a person trained in the religious practice of circumcision — sucking the blood from the wound on the infant's genitals.

The city's health department has linked the practice to neonatal cases of herpes.

Of the six Democratic candidates for mayor, Erick Salgado, Bill de Blasio, and John Liu had no problem with the procedure and were opposed to the Bloomberg administration instituting a requirement that parents must sign a consent form prior to using this method.

Christine Quinn said she would keep the requirement in place.

The question arose because of two recent cases of infections: in the last three months, two more babies were infected, according to the Department of Health.

According to reports, none of the parents of the babies signed consent forms. DANIELLE TCHOLAKIAN

Controversial practice

The most recent tally is 13 children infected since 2000, including two infants who died and two with brain damage.

Sandy floods could hit NYC regularly by 2100

Sea levels are predicted to rise by five feet on the East Coast. / GETTY IMAGES

Storm warning. A new report predicts rising sea levels in N.Y. will cause regular flooding.

By the end of the century, melting glaciers could raise water levels on the eastern seaboard five feet higher. That means that even run-of-the-mill storms will be capable of producing the kind of catastrophic flooding that superstorm Sandy — a so-called "one-in-500-year storm" — unleashed on the tri-state area last year.

A new report by Mark Fischetti in Scientific American breaks down the implications of the likely rise in sea levels over the next 87 years. His prediction? Sandy-level flooding every two to three years.

The destruction that followed Sandy has spurred people to action in the worst-hit areas. Power companies and governments have proposed buffer zones and unveiled plans to stormproof electrical infrastructure in the New York metropolitan area.

Fischetti argues these steps won't be enough.

"Retreat from low-lying shores may be the best option," he writes.

Gut reaction

"Despite the gut reaction of 'No, we won't go,' climate forces already in motion may leave few options." Fischetti

Lawsuit. Court papers allege DA's office ran 'private jail system'

Brooklyn District Attorney Charles Hynes' office used hotel rooms to hold witnesses against their will and force them into testifying, said shocking new court papers filed on Wednesday, May 29, by lawyer Joel Rudin.

Rudin is the lawyer for Jabbar Collins, a man who spent 15 years in jail for murdering a Brooklyn rabbi until he was ordered free by a federal judge.

Rudin has filed a $150 million wrongful-conviction lawsuit against Hynes' office.

Rudin cited a deposition by a former investigator in Hynes' office who described the practice of using warrants to arrest witnesses and trapping uncooperative ones in hotel rooms, The Daily News reports.

"There are circumstances where the person will say, 'I'm not coming. No way.' And then, we would immediately handcuff them and take them away," said Christopher Salsarulo, according to a transcript.

A spokesman for Hynes had no comment on the allegations, the News reported.

Collins was freed in 2010 after the mishandling of his case became evident. LAURA SHIN

Father of slain man linked to Boston bomb suspects wants FBI agents charged

Shot. He questioned accounts at a news conference in Moscow, saying his son was unarmed. He said he suspected his son might have been killed to keep him silent.

The father of a Chechen immigrant shot dead during FBI questioning over his links with the Boston Marathon bombing suspects said on Thursday that the American agents responsible were "bandits" who should face trial.

The FBI has said that Ibragim Todashev, 27, was being questioned at his apartment in Florida on May 22 when he suddenly attacked an agent and was shot and killed because of the "imminent threat posed by the individual."

"I want justice, and I want there to be an investigation, so that these people are tried under American law," said Todashev. "These are not FBI agents but bandits — I cannot call them anything else, and they must be tried."

He showed reporters photographs of his son's shirtless corpse on a medical table with stitched-up, purplish wounds on his torso, arm and head. REUTERS

Threatening letter. Secret Service probes note sent to Obama

Authorities intercepted a threatening letter addressed to President Barack Obama that was similar to ones sent to New York Mayor Michael Bloomberg, the Secret Service said on Thursday.

Letters sent to Bloomberg and his gun control group contained material believed to be the deadly poison ricin and contained a reference to gun control, New York police said on Wednesday.

A Secret Service official said the White House letter was similar but did not elaborate.

The White House mail screening facility turned the letter over to the FBI's Joint Terrorism Task Force, the Secret Service official said on condition of anonymity. REUTERS

AMERICA: THE NO VACATION NATION

Opinion

TOM FOREMAN
POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT FOR CNN

CNN=POLITICS

I was sitting in my backyard last night when my dog walked up. "You look tired," she said. "What's the matter?"

"Oh, nothing," I replied. "Just beat. Too many hours at the office. Too many emails. You know how it is."

"Actually, no," she said. "I'm unemployed, and I lack opposable thumbs, but I get the idea. You know what you need, my friend? A vacation." She's right. And I suspect I am not the only one.

Yet, once again, as summer gins up, millions of us will not be joining the ranks of those bound for beaches, resorts and theme parks. Some people can't afford the trip; others fear that layoff-hungry bosses will see them as "lazy." And according to a study by the Center for Economic and Policy Research, about a quarter of us are allotted no vacation time by our employers.

In this regard, labor rights advocates have long complained that we lag far behind virtually every other major nation where vacation time is not only taken much more readily, but required by law. In Japan, workers receive a minimum of 10 days of vacation. In Germany, it jumps to 24 days. And in France, it's up to 30. No surprise there — I suppose you don't get that passionate about cheese without having some time on your hands, n'est-ce pas?

Still, the fact remains that most people living in the industrialized world take longer and more frequent breaks than do Americans. You can argue we've built an amazingly strong nation and economy through all of our hard work, despite recent setbacks. But I'm beginning to wonder if, by limiting, shortchanging or just plain skipping so many vacations, we're burning out the very "get 'er done" spirit that has led us to greatness and can help us recover now; we're losing our perspective and energy; we're going a little crazy.

So if you are planning to skip your vacation … don't. Take the time. Recharge. That's my plan, and I think it's overdue. After all, I'm talking to dogs.

Mystery solved?

Aircraft recovery group possibly locates Amelia Earhart's plane

Researchers have been trying to track Amelia Earhart's plane after it mysteriously disappeared in 1937.

More than 10 years ago, The International Group for Historic Aircraft Recovery (TIGHAR) isolated the Pacific island of Nikumaroro as the location where her plane likely went down. Now, the organization says that underwater sonar images taken during a 2012 island visit support the location theory.

Since discovering the location in 2000, other clues have been found, including shards of plexiglass from a windscreen and aluminum from an aircraft body. Theories also suggest that Earhart and Noonan survived on the island for some time before dying of injury or infection.

The grainy photo reveals there is something approximately 600 feet below the surface. TIGHAR is calling it an "anomaly."

"The most prominent part of the anomaly appears to be less than 32 feet long," TIGHAR's website says.

Earhart's plane was reportedly 38 feet 7 inches long.

HERE'S WHAT'S SEXY

Trend. With "Girls" a hit and plus-sized models becoming the norm, we wonder: Are the days of the blonde bimbo over?

The biggest sex story of the past year didn't happen between Christian and Anastasia in some porn your mom read — it happened in Brooklyn when Adam banged Hannah and probably gave her an STD. The HBO series "Girls," with its frank depiction of bad dirty talk, venereal diseases, abortions, miscarriages and condom spill, is all about sex. But unlike "Sex and the City" before it, this show is a global hit partly because star/creator Lena Dunham is, well, average-looking. She's a chubby, tattooed, thin-haired 26-year-old. She's normal.

The hype comes at the perfect time for the "real beauty" movement — and for this Metro Sex Issue, themed "Feel Good Naked." Within the past month, plus-size model Jennie Runk made headlines when H+M debuted her modeling swimwear (despite being a dress size 14-16, not 0). Dove soap, on the tails of an ad campaign featuring plus-size women, launched an "anti-Photoshop" app that restores images to their original form. And "amateur" porn is the most popular category on YouPorn, ranking higher than "blondes." The house that Jenna Jameson built is crumbling. The question is: How quickly?

So yes, how quickly?

In one year, or in five? "I don't think five years is enough," says Gabi Gregg, 26, a plus-size blogger. Her work went viral last year after she posted photos of herself looking sensual in a "fatkini" and, this week, she launches her own line of swimwear (see story, at right). "But people like Lena Dunham and Louis C.K. are opening doors. Just the fact that her body makes people so angry — if you read the comments, people are telling her to put on clothes. She has said that only makes her want to do it more. It's my favorite show."

Arielle Loren doesn't watch "Girls," but also traffics in blunt depictions of sex. Her magazine Corset (www.corsetmagazine.com) features graphic nudity and first-person erotica, and resembles someone's beautifully photographed diary. It became profitable after a year, and Loren sees it as part of a movement. "The way we learn about sex, the pornography industry drives a lot of that consciousness," says Loren, a 27-year-old American. "It starts to inform the way we think about 'sexy' from an early age. But there are multifaceted aspects of sex and what it can really be, which we explore in the magazine. That goes from everything you can do in the bedroom — physically — but also how we understand our bodies."

A recent Corset photoshoot, "Breasts in Erotic Daylight," features a brown bosom with stretch marks. "We definitely don't airbrush," says Loren. "There's something very sexy about that. Being able to see the hair follicles on a breast or the stretch marks on a woman's stomach." She now has subscribers here, in Canada, Peru, Brazil, Sweden and beyond.

Junk in Runk's trunk

The excitement (and debate) over Runk's H+M campaign made it all the way to Italy, where she was working in May. It led to at least one sleepless night. "I was thinking about all the media I've been getting and my mom reads a lot of the comments and she said, 'I can't believe somebody called you fat,'" remembers the 24-year-old, "and some people on the other side were like, 'The curvier bodies are better!' and it's so ridiculous that people are having these arguments. What if some girl looks at these pictures and looks exactly like me: How is she going to feel?"

She turned to Facebook with a post. "I've noticed that people like to debate what kind of body is better than another," she wrote. "This is all wrong! To me, true beauty is defined by a healthy lifestyle and a genuine personality. Bodies are just meaty things that carry our personhoods around for us." A week later, Runk is still riled up. She notes that "bigger" models are getting more work, but "we should focus on embracing all sizes," she says bluntly.

"Should" is different than "are." The chart below shows the Sex Symbols of 2013, as selected by our editors from a pool of working actors who have notable projects this year — there are more shapes and sizes than there would have been in 1985, but it's still very thin and white. "We're going in the right direction," says Gregg, "but ... "

"This argument," adds Runk, "is going to be a thing of the past when — honestly, I don't know." On Facebook, she was more hopeful, saying it's "our differences that make us remarkable."

She laughs when she hears that again. "I've been told before I'm a little too naive."

'FATKINI' DESIGNER GABI GREGG

In school, did you realize you were bigger than everybody else?
Yes and no. I wasn't teased too much, luckily. It was mostly internal, feeling insecure next to my classmates, if they were thinner than me or had blonde hair. Nobody had to say anything. And I started trying to diet when I was in middle school and high school, and it wasn't until college that I came to accept myself.

How do the suits, um, work?
What do you mean by work? [Laughs]

They fit so well. Is it made with a binding material, with latches or something?
Actually, no. I've had people ask about support, of course, but there's nothing special about the fabric of the suits. It's normal bathing suit fabric. In terms of the Galaxy suit, what makes it so special is the print — it's graphic and fun and looks great because it's so busy that it — I don't want to say it distracts the eye, because I don't care about that sort of thing, but that's what it does. And the high-waisted cut looks great on all women.

Quoted

Are you OK with the term "fatkini"?
Yes. I didn't use it this year because it went so viral last year, and it was inspiring for many people but took away from it, for others, because they were stuck on the word and got angry and started commenting. It's a reclamation of the word "fat," especially in our community, we all get it. When it goes outside the community, people get angry and send emails. But I'm fine with it. At the end of the day, it's a fatkini because I'm fat and wearing a bikini. [Laughs]

How much do you weigh now?
I believe I'm around 225.

How tall are you?
I'm 5-foot-5.

Do you get flack for not being "fat enough?" Early on, there were some comments.
I don't get a lot. Once in a while, like when the bikini pictures come out. It's funny to see half the people commenting are disgusted by my body and the other half are like, fat women saying, "She's shaped so nicely so it doesn't count! I have fat hanging from my arm that she doesn't have!" I try to avoid the comments on other sites. Some women wish they could see women bigger than me in a bikini and I understand that but I can only be myself. SAM CASTONE

How to feel good naked

Health. The author of "WomanCode" turns your body into a "power source"with these sexy tips.

Bloating. Zits. Decreased sex drive. If you're a woman, and you're aging up, we may have just described your average Tuesday night. Alisa Vitti, a hormonal health expert and the author of "WomanCode," a book about "supercharging your sex drive," says it doesn't have to be that way. "What's normal is a sex drive that increases as you age," she says. "You need to train the body to maximize the kinds of foods that provide us with micronutrients that help us produce optimal levels of hormones, metabolize them and get them out of the body." It all starts with your diet.

AVOID:

SOY: More specifically, soy protein isolate. It's packed full of estrogen, which risks to exacerbate hormonal symptoms. However, small quantities of fermented soy, such as miso paste, tofu and tempeh, are OK.

COW'S MILK: It contains casein, a protein that can make it difficult for nutrients to get to the target glands of the endocrine system (a collection of glands that secrete hormones). This can make it difficult for proper hormonal function and elimination and worsen symptoms such as acne. Concerned about calcium? Bok Choy and sesame seeds are good alternatives to dairy.

WHEAT: Actually, it's the protein that gives wheat-based foods such as pizza their chewy texture: gluten. It has been shown to decrease fertility by raising stress levels.

LOAD UP ON:

GREEN JUICE: The antioxidant glutathione, present in raw fruit and vegetables, helps with egg quality, liver detoxification and to protect the ovaries. One juice a day is enough, just blend together some kale, cucumber, parsley, ginger, lemon and apple.

EGGS: These help the body make progesterone, the hormone that opposes estrogen and keeps you balanced in terms of your mood.

AVOCADO: This is a great source of essential fatty acids. As hormones are stabilized in a lipid ring, EFA's help keep them stable and function properly.

SPINACH and KALE: The dark, leafy greens contain calcium and magnesium that help the body break down and eliminate estrogen, which in excess, is at the root of many hormonal symptoms.

Ela Darling

What's hot? Nerds. What's not? Blondes?

Report. In the porn world, the blonde bombshell is losing out to "more natural" types. "But I don't think one is more acceptable than the other," says one star.

At one point in her life, the woman we now know as Ela Darling was a librarian. But the 9 to 5 routine bored her. So she began posing in bondage shoots. Then she posed in nude bondage photography. Soon after, Ela was starring in lesbian and BSDM videos and hosting own website (www.darlingela.com), which she calls "pretty porn for smart people."

"I decided that if you put the nude and bondage together, you basically had porn," Ela tells us. "So, I decided to give it a shot — and I really, really liked it." The skinny, 5-foot-8 B-cup library nerd had become a porn star.

The girl next door

These days, your porn performer isn't always a hot blonde in a cheerleader outfit. Instead, she may resemble the actual girl next door. The most popular videos on YouPorn fall into the amateur category, and — whether it's filled with actual amateurs or not — there you'll find small breasts, stretch marks, acne, lanky bodies, big noses and other all-natural qualities.

Quoted

Jesse Jane, porn star

"There's always been a market for the girl next door, [where[everybody's natural, but it's really popular now," veteran porn star Jesse Jane, now in her 11th year doing films, told Metro World News.

She says the Internet has led to the rise in "amateur" acts. People can enter the industry by posting on the Web instead of having to vie for the few contracts with an adult entertainment company.

"Before, you would know who the top porn girls were," Jesse says. "Now, you wouldn't be able to name a handful of the girls who are in the industry. Before, they made the focus on a star and built the companies around a girl, making that girl the fantasy."

Zombie porn

Jesse may be one of the last of the contract girls. Blonde and bubbly with large fake breasts, she's exactly what you picture when you hear the words "porn star." She has noticed that recent girls she's worked with have been selected to look like "someone you would see in Starbucks."

Ela believes the reason why we're seeing so many regular-looking people is because of a movement to embrace who we are. For Ela — the girl-next-door with a fairy-like quality — that means that sometimes she's dressed up as a zombie. Sometimes she's peddling sweaty, smelly shoes to foot fetishists. Sometimes she's starring in BDSM videos, experimenting with machines and trying out being hog-tied and tortured.

"What I didn't even realize shooting porn is how much I began to evolve in my comfort with sex and with my own body," she says. (The same could be said for the viewer, who can explore their basest fantasies in their living rooms.) Given that all-inclusive feeling she, for one, may dislike our photo above, pitting two women against one another. "There's lots of different 'persons' [in porn)] but I don't think one is more acceptable than the other. People pursue porn in a way that's comfortable to them."

"The blonde girl for some reason, I don't think that market will ever go away with the porn girls with big fake boobs," she says between a giggle. "I think that will always be there."

Will and Jaden Smith teaming up for "After Earth" has us thinking of other real-life parent-child movies. MATT PRIGGE

In theaters

Will and Jaden Smith

The film: 'After Earth' (2013)
Their ages: 44 and 14
Their roles: Will is a space general who tries to survive on a dangerous postapocalyptic Earth alongside his son, played by Jaden.
The result: Jaden is the luckiest kid in the world, whose father bought him "The Karate Kid." But their films together aren't pretty: "The Pursuit of Happyness," made when Jaden was 8, found them pursuing the American dream while spending nights on the street or in dodgy shelters.

Joe and Buster Keaton

THE FILM:
'Sherlock, Jr.' (1924)

THEIR AGES:
58 and 29

THEIR ROLES:
Buster is a lowly movie projectionist who one day wills himself into the detective film he's screening. Joe plays the father of "The Girl."

THE RESULT:
Joe and his wife Myra were vaudeville legends who started using Buster in their act when he was only a few years old. Buster's shtick involved being thrown about the stage. Buster later repaid the favor by giving his father, by then a full-on alkie, bit parts in his some of his masterpieces.

The actors, films	Their ages	Their roles	The results
Melvin and Mario Van Peebles 'Sweet Sweetback's Baadasssss Song' (1971)	39, 14	Melvin plays an entertainer at a brothel falsely accused by "The Man." Mario plays his younger self in a fairly graphic introductory scene where he loses his virginity to a prostitute. Thanks, dad!	Even though what was shot very nearly qualifies as child pornography, it apparently wasn't traumatic. Mario grew up idolizing and often working with his father. He became a filmmaker himself, making "New Jack City" and "Baadasssss!" — an account of the making of his father's pioneering black cinema classic. Mario even stars as his wildly charismatic, cigar-chomping, ladykiller pop.
Ryan and Tatum O'Neal 'Paper Moon' (1973)	32, 10	Ryan is a charismatic con man in the Depression-era South who collects fraudulent fees from rubes for bibles. Tatum plays a little girl who may be his daughter. She proves a grifting prodigy.	Ryan, often a wooden rent-a-hunk, was atypically alive and hilarious in this Peter Bogdanovich comedy. Ditto, for that matter, Tatum, who became the youngest-ever Oscar winner. She did "The Bad News Bears" but struggled through an adult career. Ryan, meanwhile, did two more films of major note ("Barry Lyndon" and "The Driver"), but soon returned to crap films. Their relationship became strained. Tatum alleged that Ryan hit on her at Farah Fawcett's funeral.
Harry and Jane Fonda 'On Golden Pond' (1981)	76, 44	Henry is a crotchety, terminally sweary old-timer who is estranged from his daughter, played by Jane. This isn't that far from the truth, except that Henry wasn't married to Katharine Hepburn.	The two were famously estranged, despite him being, like her, a liberal, back when such a thing wasn't cool. The film helped them patch things up, just as happens in the film. Henry died soon after winning his first Oscar, which Jane accepted on his behalf.
Charlie and Martin Sheen 'Wall Street' (1987)	47, 22	Charlie is an upstart who gets associated with the wrong scene, while his father scowls. They also acted in this movie together.	The two would reunite, for about 10 seconds, in "Hot Shots Part Deux," in a scene that parodies "Apocalypse Now": Passing by each other on ships, they simultaneously stand and proclaim, "Loved you in 'Wall Street!'"
Sylvester and Sage Stallone 'Rocky V' (1990)		Sly is a slow mumblemouth who solved the Cold War, but is still stuck penniless in a miserable South Philly neighborhood because his brother-in-law Paulie is an idiot. Sage is his resentful son who gets an earring.	Sage took over the role of Rocky Jr. from someone actually named Rocky Krakoff. He didn't get great reviews, but neither did the film. Still, he acted again with his dad in "Daylight," and appears in Vincent Gallo's "Promises Written in Water," which Gallo won't let anyone see. Last year, Sage died of a heart attack at 36 years old.
Jon Voight and Angelina Jolie 'Lara Croft: Tomb Raider' (2001)	44, 14	Jolie is a buxom archaeologist who does all the things that Indiana Jones can't, like have breasts. Voight is her dead father who she meets in an alternate dimension.	Jolie and Voight have had a bumpy relationship. They reconnected as her career exploded, then "broke up" again, then came back together after her mother's death. Still, Voight said he found out about her double mastectomy with everyone else.

Will and Jaden Smith get stranded on our postapocalyptic planet in "After Earth." / COLUMBIA PICTURES

Review

'Now You See Me'

Director. Louis Leterrier

Stars. Jesse Eisenberg, Mark Ruffalo

Rating. PG-13

A friend once said it was wrong to seek a simple, rational understanding of Andrei Tarkovsky's "The Mirror." The same could be said about "Now You See Me." The difference is that "The Mirror" is a mysterious, confounding art-film masterpiece, while "Now You See Me" is a silly magician thriller that plays like the ravings of a madman.

Jesse Eisenberg headlines a comically overqualified cast as one of a quartet of sleight-of-hand experts embroiled in a simple plan: Become world-famous magicians who, while performing in the largest auditorium in Vegas, somehow steal money from a bank in France and spread the wealth among their packed house. Why? How? It's never clear.

The actors look as lost as the audience: Poor Mark Ruffalo, as a detective, seems as frustrated as his character. Not since "Dreamcatcher" has a major studio product been so consistently and hilariously dumb. MATT PRIGGE

M. Night Shyamalan has had it rough the last decade, or as rough as a millionaire hot-shot Hollywood director can have it. Scorn has been heaped on his work, a lot of it earned. "The Happening" and "The Last Airbender" are dreadful (honestly, so is "The Sixth Sense"), but even those have a unique, stubborn sensibility all his own. A good deal of Shyamalan's personality is suppressed in "After Earth," which is perhaps not coincidentally his closest-to-good film since "Signs."

Yet another postapocalyptic romp, made in collaboration with the Smiths — that is, Will and Jaden — it stars the former as the amusingly named Cypher Raige, a space general we're told is "so completely free of fear he's invisible." (Okay, then.) His son Kitai (Jaden) isn't quite so brave. But as luck would have it, an accident strands them on the long-ago abandoned Earth. Cypher is rewarded with a pair of broken legs, leaving Kitai to man up and trek the fearsome wild to save them.

Review

'After Earth'

Director. M. Night Shyamalan

Stars. Jaden Smith, Will Smith

Rating. PG-13

"After Earth" promises a boys' adventure on the order of Cornel Wilde's '60s African chase jaunt "The Naked Prey." It about half-delivers. "Everything on this planet has evolved to kill humans," Cypher warns. If only. The scary futuristic animals — anry monkeys, a mega-hawk — are easily avoided, even nice when properly prodded. For a trek into the danger zone, this is curiously light on thrills and spills.

Shyamalan mostly stays out of the way but makes himself known — and not in good ways. For someone who directed one of the great child performances, Shyamalan's a terrible director of child actors. Jaden, a likable braggart in "The Karate Kid," is only a mite less awkward and declamatory than the kids in "The Last Airbender."

His father is another story. Playing stern and taciturn, Will Smith is cast against type, but he's all the more imposing because he's forcibly concealing his natural warm spirits. One forever expects him to crack a smile and say "Just kidding." He doesn't, ever, and that tension puts him on list of excellent actors, with Toni Colette and Paul Giamatti, who can make Shyamalan's films — stiff, heavy, childish and borderline amateurish, if often intriguingly so — seem briefly natural.

PETER SARSGAARD

A KILLER INSIDE HIM

The third season of AMC's crime procedural "The Killing," which premieres this Sunday, has a new storyline and some new cast members. Among the neophytes is Peter Sarsgaard, a talented actor who's been among the best things in "Boys Don't Cry," "Garden State," "Shattered Glass" and "An Education." In his first season-long television stint — which he was still shooting when we talked — Sarsgaard plays Ray Seward, a sinister death row inmate who killed his wife.

Quoted

"If you don't believe in the death penalty, you have to take an extreme circumstance — someone who's indefensible — to see if it still applies." Peter Sarsgaard, on playing a death row inmate

What are the challenges of playing a death row inmate?
So much of my story takes place in the same spot. In a lot of movies, there's the car chase, the scene at breakfast, the sex scene. This is about always going to the same cell. You have to find ways of doing a different dance on the same dance floor.

Was those challenges what drew you to "The Killing?"
Those, and also because the issues interested me. I'm very much against the death penalty. It's very easy to do a piece about someone who's been railroaded by the system who's innocent. If you don't believe in the death penalty, you have to take an extreme circumstance — someone who's indefensible — to see if it still applies. Otherwise, the death penalty applies in some cases.

What made you want to work on TV?
Just this show. I always really liked this show. I thought this material was better than some of the film stuff I was being offered. It seemed there was more of a role there.

So many of my favorite actors are on television. So, if you want to act with them you have to be on television.

How is TV acting different from stage or film acting?
It's really fast. And because you don't know the show as well as the showrunners or the writers, you're more at their mercy. On a film you'll know the whole story, and you'll go up to the director and say "Oh, this doesn't seem right to me, this entire scene." And we'll work on it or they'll tell me to shut the f— up. There's more interaction about content. But on TV, with a series like this, you just have to trust them.

'Manhattan Mediterranean'

When "Modern Mediterranean" landed on our desk, we were just as enamored by the bright, happy colors and gorgeous photographs of chef Melia Marden's stylish recipes and eclectic home as we were by her fairy-tale backstory. Each summer, Marden's parents, New York artists Brice and Helen Marden, whisked their kids off to the family's vacation home on the idyllic Greek island of Hydra. It was there, feasting on dishes such as just-caught charred whole fish and ripe vine tomatoes with tangy feta, that Marden developed her culinary ethos. Then in 2008, with very little restaurant experience, the French Culinary Institute grad became the executive chef at New York hot spot The Smile, where she serves "Manhattan Mediterranean."

"It's not pure Mediterranean food," she says. "It's all the different versions of the cuisine converged with NYC — like the Greek restaurants in Astoria." Now the 32-year-old shares her story, along with her love for simple, flavorful dishes, in her new cookbook.

"When you eat something that's really heavy and has lots of different ingredients, you feel weighed down," explains Marden. "Mediterranean cooking is light and healthy. The flavors are bright and fresh, you can taste every ingredient that's in the dish — and it makes you feel good afterwards."

'The Internship' crashers

Love hasn't seen her daughter, Frances, in three years

This makes my heart ache. Courtney Love, grunge's version of Dina Lohan (alternately, The OG Amanda Bynes), admits in an interview on the "Howard Stern Show" that she hasn't seen her daughter, Frances Bean Cobain, in three years. And yet, things are "really good" between them.

"I'm really good with my daughter right now," she told the shock jock. Despite the fact they haven't seen each other in the flesh, they "email and tweet." And, really, if your mother is Courtney Love, emailing and tweeting without seeing each other is probably the stuff that happy and healthy mother-daughter relationships are made of.

Love also disclosed that she's going to appear on a reality show, but demurred as to which one. Stern desperately wants it to be "American Idol," which, um, yes please. If not, "Duck Dynasty" could also work.

Beckham teams up with Ramsay in Las Vegas?

With his days playing soccer behind him, David Beckham is clearly on the lookout for new ways to spend his time.

One way, as it turns out, is teaming with pal Gordon Ramsay to open a sports bar and grill in the Wynn Hotel in Las Vegas, according to the Sun.

But not so fast, everybody. Beckham's rep insists that the rumors of the Vegas joint venture are completely unfounded, though they are opening a London restaurant, Union Street Cafe, in September.

Stewart's never had, um, pizza?

If Patrick Stewart's Twitter account is to be believed, the "X-Men" star has never had a slice of pizza — until now. Stewart posted a photo of himself indulging in some of New York's finest, along with the caption, "My first ever pizza 'slice.' Please note the authentic NY fold." It is curious, of course, that he put slice in quotes. A follow-up tweet by Stewart to offer clarification actually didn't offer much clarification: "To clarify," he wrote, "I've never had a 'slice.'" Well, the important thing is that he has now.

Shakira wants to breast-feed her son until college

Shakira wants to make sure her son never goes hungry. The "Voice" judge is so into breast-feeding her 4-month-old son Milan that she has no plans to stop until he is legally old enough to refuse. "Breastfeeding has been one of the best experiences of my life," she told Us Weekly. "I think I'm going to breast-feed him until he goes to college!"

She continued: "I thought I was going to be super controlling," she said. "It's so surprising, because everybody thought I was going to be one of those hysterical, smothering mothers."

Nightlife. Summer is the perfect time to revisit The McKittrick Hotel.

Enjoy panoramic views of Chelsea from Gallow Green at The McKittrick Hotel. / PAUL WAGTOUICZ

Punchdrunk's "Sleep No More," an immersive theater experience loosely based on the story of "Macbeth," has been wowing audiences since 2011. More than just a show, this experience spans five stories of Chelsea's The McKittrick Hotel (530 W. 27th St.), including the Manderley Bar, with live lounge performances that last late into the night.

Following the spectacular popularity of "Sleep No More," The McKittrick branched out to host themed party nights on occasions such as Valentine's Day and Halloween.

This season, the hotel goes one step further and is premiering additions that, as they attest, will posit The McKittrick as the area's ultimate nightlife destination.

One example is Gallow Green, the rooftop garden bar that offers panoramic city views. A cocktail list boasts offerings by mixologist Dave Wondrich and features a variety of alcoholic punches (punch drunk, get it?) that are available to share. A limited menu includes an array of sweet and savory bites devised by chef R.L. King.

Gallow Green will be open nightly through autumn. Guests don't need tickets to "Sleep No More" to come upstairs and enjoy an evening of drinks under the stars — however, it's the perfect place to imbibe before or after the show. Table reservations are strongly encouraged (www.mckittrickhotel.com/gallowgreen).

Of course, it just wouldn't be "Sleep No More" if there weren't always just one more surprise lurking around the bend. The McKittrick recently hosted the premiere party for Lady Antebellum's latest album, as well as after-parties for the Tribeca Film Festival. Keep an ear to the ground for even more exciting events that are already in the works.

Horoscope

♊ Gemini | May 22-June 20. Underestimating your competition is apt to produce undesirable results.

♋ Cancer | June 21-July 22. It's extremely important that you maintain a realistic but positive attitude concerning your work.

♌ Leo | July 23-Aug. 22. Your survival today depends on how well you can function independently of others. Don't operate under the illusion that co-workers are looking out for anyone other than themselves.

♍ Virgo | Aug. 23-Sept. 22. It would be wise to support your mate in public, even if you secretly disagree with his or her position..

♎ Libra | Sept. 23-Oct. 22. Instead of trying to impose your thinking on your co-workers today, first listen to their ideas and/or what they have to say.

♏ Scorpio | Oct. 23-Nov. 21. Since finances are likely to be a touchy issue, instead of getting involved in a joint endeavor, try to handle all of your funds yourself.

♈ Aries | March 21-April 20. Don't be intimidated by someone who expresses him or herself in a bold, traumatic fashion.

♉ Taurus | April 21-May 21. It's best not to enter into a joint venture without a clear sense of where it will all lead. Make sure everyone's priorities are in place. BERNICE BEDE OSOL

It's better to err on the side of watchdogs

Re: Stop blaming America first (Metro, May 29) I am an American. As a citizen of a republic, I have a responsibility — not to display a flag pin or a car magnet, but to pay attention to what my government is doing, participate in public discourse and vote accordingly. If I assume something is affected by U.S. policy, but find that it's purely a matter of Bangladeshi managerial incompetence, I've wasted a little time. If I err the other direction, I've neglected my duty. So go ahead and call me a "BAF." That's a label I can wear with pride. DAN WYLIE-SEARS, VIA E-MAIL

Waste not, complain not

Re: Look twice, shoot once (Metro, May 30) Letter writer Jonathan Perry is off base when he blames Congress for the Washington bridge collapse.

The bridge collapsed when a truck hit supporting structure. Congress did agree in 2009 to massive infrastructure spending, but Obama wasted it on other things.

Now he complains that Republicans won't let him do that again. JIM FLETCHER, VIA E-MAIL

VIDEO: Highlights of Thursday night's final game of the Subway Series at Metro.us/sports

Nicks still on outs with Giants, skips practices

NFL. Big Blue hit the field for a second round of OTAs, with the star receiver mysteriously absent for the second time.

Giants head coach Tom Coughlin likes to use the phrase "next man up" any time it's feasible. And unfortunately for the grizzled coach, he's had to use that credo more than he'd probably like during Big Blue's offseason workout program.

Wideout Hakeem Nicks and defensive ends Justin Tuck and Jason Pierre-Paul were all absent from Thursday's voluntary organized team activity (OTAs), but only Nicks was unexcused — again.

Nicks has given no reason for his absence, and the lack of communication on his end is certainly starting to get under the skin of Coughlin.

"I have not, no. None," Coughlin said when asked if he's heard from Nicks or his representatives since he missed the last round of OTAs. "At one point, Hakeem told me he was going to be here, and then he was not here. … In the strictest interpretation, everybody knows it's a voluntary program, [but] I am not balancing [guys missing time] very well."

Fellow wide receiver Victor Cruz was also absent on Thursday, as he continues his contract dispute with the team. Nicks is a free agent after this season, but has not publicly said whether he will hold out for a new deal.

Open advantage

Tracy looking for bigger role

Tracy, who has yet to make a splash in his first three seasons, said he's relishing the opportunity.

"I'm just trying to take advantage of any opportunities," said Tracy. "Whenever you're able to take advantage of those things, you take it, because if you don't, someone else will."

Pace playing veteran role for defense

Calvin Pace is back where he always wanted to be.

The Jets cut Pace in February, then re-signed him last month. He spoke on Thursday for the first time since being brought back. He is one of the few veterans on a team that has seen a drastic overhaul and rebuilding this offseason.

"[I'm] happy to be back, happy to have a job. It's all good. [There are] a lot of different faces, trying to get acclimated to that," Pace said. "Nowadays, it is kind of the way of football. It was good while it lasted. It is a lot of new guys, a lot of youth. I guess our task is to try to get to know everyone as quick as possible, everybody get on the same page."

NFL. Jets rookie QB Smith denies being recruited by Jay-Z

In the wake of an investigation by the player's association, Jets rookie quarterback Geno Smith said Thursday he wasn't influenced by rap mogul Jay-Z to join upstart agency Roc Nation Sports.

The NFLPA is looking into what Jay-Z's influence on Smith might have been, especially since Roc Nation did not have any certified negotiators on staff at the time.

"I don't have any concerns. Jay-Z didn't recruit me," Smith said. "I chose Roc Nation Sports for management because it was something that myself and my family came to a conclusion and we felt comfortable with and I'm happy to be a part of that.

"I'm here to talk about football and that's life outside of football. And what I do in this locker room and on that field is what matters."

Niese to miss start due to shoulder pain

MLB. The Mets' No. 2 starter has been pitching with shoulder tendinitis his past three starts.

To keep the problem from escalating further, the Mets have decided to skip his scheduled start Saturday afternoon against the Marlins. Niese's next start would be June 7 against the Marlins.

Collins said the soreness has been bothering over Niese over his last three starts. During that stretch, Niese has allowed three earned runs over 20 1/3 innings.

"He was a lot sore after his last start," Collins said. "We gave him a day off and we wanted to see how he came back yesterday. He was still sore. We had him examined this morning and soreness was still there."

Niese underwent an MRI Thursday and no structural damage appeared. He said the discomfort started after he was pounded for eight runs and eight hits in 4 1/3 innings during an 11-2 loss to Pittsburgh on May 11.

Collins indicated Collin McHugh will replace Niese Saturday and emphatically stated that top pitching prospect Zach Wheeler was not a consideration.

"No, no, none, none," Collins said of any possible Wheeler promotion.

Tejada placed on 15-day DL

Ruben Tejada has spent the past few weeks avoiding a demotion to Triple-A.
